Trio Found Guilty of Violent Robbery at Clothing Store

Three men were found guilty today for their roles in an armed robbery at a Westchester clothing store where more than a dozen employees were held hostage, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Jurors deliberated for more than a day before finding Raymond Sherman Jr., 36, guilty of 17 counts, including forcible rape, kidnapping and second-degree robbery. Troy Marsay Hammock, 31, was found guilty of 14 counts of second-degree robbery, while Everett Oneal Allen, 26, was found guilty of 14 counts of second-degree robbery and one count of assault with a deadly weapon.

Deputy District Attorney Cynthia Barnes of the Major Crimes Division prosecuted the case.

On Jan. 10, 2013, the defendants stormed a clothing store at Promenade at Howard Hughes Center about 11 p.m. The robbery was reported by a spouse of an employee. A SWAT team responded and surrounded the store.

During the robbery, most of the employees were forced to strip down to their underwear. At one point, Sherman forced a female employee into a room and sexually assaulted her, Barnes said. Allen held a knife to a worker's neck, piercing her skin, the prosecutor added.

The three men managed to escape and the employees were freed several hours later.

Sentencing is scheduled for April 8. Sherman faces a maximum sentence of more than 120 years to life in state prison, while Hammock and Allen face up to 45 years and 39 years in prison, respectively.

Case BA406798 was investigated by Los Angeles Police Department's Robbery-Homicide Division.
